From provoking the existence of extraterrestrial life, four of the world's most important scientists are British and female: Spies meets them.

"The idea of being the first to discover amazing things about the human race is incredibly exciting."